Additional TPP News

Hillary will back the Trans-Pacific Partnership (TPP) if elected, or so believe Bill Reinsch, a trade policy fellow at the Center Stimson, a nonpartisan think tank, Millan Mulraine, deputy head of U.S. research and strategy at TD Securities, and Ken Roberts, president of WorldCity, a Miami-based media and event company focused on trade.

(based on a report by Politico Pro, 6/10/16 – no link, subscription only) under the heading: TPP isn't greedy enough - GOP leadership is concerned over the patent protection period for biologics not being long enough and the financial sectors remain concerned that the financial data storage provisions in the TPP are too restrictive. All this is preventing Republican leadership from rallying around the TPP. Most Democratic and some Republican members of congress remain concerned about the TPP's negative effect on jobs.

(based on a report in Washington Trade Daily, 6/14/16)
